

Working with Rural Populations

Virtual workshop open to students, faculty, community organizations and individuals.

Friday, April 11, 2025
10-11:30 a.m.
Via Zoom

Topics to be covered include:

- Demographics Characteristics of Rural Populations
- Cultural Values of Rural Communities and their Relevance to Public health
- Ethical issues Associated with Working in Rural Settings
- Best Practices For Engaging Rural Communities.

Register here:

<https://bit.ly/rural2025>

Featuring: John Clements, PhD & Natalie Kasiborski, PhD, LMSW, MPH

Dr. Clements is an Associate Professor in the Master of Public Health Program. His scholarly interests include health services and outcomes research and rural health outcomes. Some of his recent research has examined rural/urban differences in mortality, surgical outcomes, and infection care.

Dr. Kasiborski helps to lead the Rural Health Concentration of the Master of Public Health Program. She has actively contributed to the field of public health with a particular focus on rural communities. She previously served as Deputy Health Officer at a 4-county rural health department in Northern Michigan.

Contact: Lynne Lievens
lieven12@msu.edu